BIG OIL FIELD.

Lawrence County is Now "On the Map."

Two New Wells Good Enough to Remove All Doubt as to this Territory.

The NEWS has been somewhat conservative in its reports of the oil development in Lawrence county. We have given as nearly the facts as it was possible to obtain, accompanied by very little comment. In these matters it is impossible to be entirely accurate, because the production of a well can be only estimated until subjected to a pumping test extending over a period of some weeks.

But we are sure of our ground at last.

Enough is now known about the field to remove all doubt that there is an extensive deposit here of the richest grade of oil. Two wells completed since the NEWS was published last week have settled the question beyond all doubt. The field extends from Three Mile creek at least six miles west and probably further. Just how far yet to be determined. Also, the width is yet to be defined, but the indications are that the field has an average width of four to six miles.

Experts representing the Standard and other oil companies have been here by the score watching the development, and these companies are now paying fancy prices for leases within the "barned circle."

The oil is of the highest quality, known as the Pennsylvania grade. It is found in the Berea grit, which is noted for the long life of its wells. Many Berea wells have been producing steadily for thirty years.

One of the wells in this field also shows enough production from the Big Sandy sand to pay.

Lawrence county is destined to become one of the richest oil producers in the country.

The Square Deal well on the Late Hays farm came in good last Friday. It is said to be making three barrels per day natural, which should be good for ten barrels after shooting. A report yesterday says there is over 100 feet of oil in the well.

The best well yet drilled is Vesper No. 2, on the O'Neal farm, subsurface of Chris Lawrence and others from the Haysville company. Estimates at 30 to 40 barrels per day are placed upon this well. This company will continue to drill wells until the lease is fully developed.

The Haysville Oil Company has a derrick completed and Sam Spencer has the contract for drilling and will start at once.

The Cochran Oil Company is rushing work on its derrick. These two companies are well within the territory counted good and excellent results are expected.

A contract has been made to develop the Andrew New farm near Torchlight. Work is to start in a short time.

The Haysville Oil Company has decided to drill more wells on its territory. Much credit for the recent development is due this company. With strenuous labor the promoters sold enough stock to drill the first well on the O'Neal farm, and being a good one this started the excitement. The first well is flowing regularly every few days.

Three or four of the new wells are to be shot this week.

Two representatives of the Cumberland Pipe Line Company will be here today to consult with the various companies about putting a pipe line into this field. This is a branch of the Standard Oil Company. A main line crosses the river about nine miles from Louisa, making the pipe line proposition an easy one.

There is considerable talk of establishing an oil refinery at Louisa to handle the oil of this territory. It is considered entirely feasible by experienced oil men and it would be well for the companies to consider this proposition before binding themselves to dispose of oil elsewhere.

Council Proceedings.

Because of no quorum on the regular date the city council held a session on the following Thursday night. Besides transacting routine business some new business was done. The poll tax for 1912 will be one dollar, the levy for each one hundred dollars will be fifty cents and the school tax ten cents.

The salary of the Marshal has been reduced from thirty-five dollars to fifteen dollars per month, with the fees which pertain to the position. It is understood that the twenty dollars taken from his salary will be paid a night policeman, who will also be required to attend to the street lights. It is argued that a good night officer is more necessary than a day officer, assuming that during the daytime our citizens can take care of themselves, while in the hours of darkness they require a vigilant, fearless protector.

The Marshal will continue to receive his commission as collector of tax. The revenue to the city from its taxable real estate for 1912 will be about $4,200. Each street light during 1912 will cost the town fifty cents per month.

Captain Marion Spurlock Dead.

The death of Captain Francis Marion Spurlock, one of the oldest steamboat men along the Ohio river, occurred this morning at 2 o'clock at the home of the family, in South Point, as a result of advanced age and general debility.

Captain Spurlock had reached the age of 79 years and during all those years he has been active in business with the exception of the past few years, when during which he had spent his time quietly awaiting the final summons.—Cattlettsburg Tribune.

From far into the 60's to far into the 80's Capt. Spurlock was well known along the Big Sandy from Cattlettsburg to the Forks. He seldom took a boat higher than Louisa.

WEST VIRGINIA WEALTH.

Our Neighbor is One of the Richest of States.

Parkersburg, W. Va., November 30. So much is being said about the wonderful richness of West Virginia in coal, oil, gas, timber, scenic, glass, sand, pottery clays and other things used in the manufacture of various articles of great commercial importance that the fact is generally overlooked, even by her own people, that as a whole is the chief business and the most important in the State.

The various daily townships of the country are filled every now and again with the great output of coal the big production of all the wonderful gas potentialities, the immense timber belt of West Virginia and the money meaning they have for the people, and practically no mention is made of its agriculture. The farmer says nothing and "saws wood," which in his case means plowing, planting and harvesting his crops, and at the end of the year has more to show in the way of accomplishment than any of the other. While coal, the most loudly published product of the State, was produced in 1910 to the amount of about $65,000,000, six agricultural items—corn, oats, wheat, hay, potatoes and live-stock—were grown to a value of $8,000,000. The fruit, berries, garden "truck" and other things brought forth by the husband man would easily run the gross amount up to $100,000,000, or almost 50 per cent. more than the returns from coal. Yet with all this, the surface of the agricultural possibilities of the State has hardly been more than scratched.

And the biggest part of the story is to come. West Virginians are sending out of the State $38,000,000 a year for the purchase of these agricultural products of daily necessity which her farmers fail and refuse to raise for them to eat. The conditions prevailing in the mining regions and about the manufacturing centers are such that prices are extraordinarily high, and the assurance of profit to the agriculturist and market gardener is absolute. Yet not only in these sections, but throughout all parts of the State, thousands of acres of fertile land are lying fallow, or are being utilized in the production of those things that bring least reward to the husbandman.

In no sections is this neglect of opportunity more apparent than in the broad acres of rich bottom and fertile uplands that lie on the West Virginia side of the Ohio river, and in no section of the country are there more inviting prospects for immediate competence and final wealth for those who put their faith in the soil and improve it by their works. From Marshall county, 8 miles above, to the Big Sandy river, 140 miles below this point, stretches as the a body of agricultural land as lies on the continent, highly productive, easily tillable and pierced by a railroad and bordered by a navigable river from end to end. A stranger passing over the Ohio river division of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the first time is struck by the fine "lay" of the land, by the splendid profusion of corn, wheat, potatoes or other field products to be seen from the car window, and marvels at the power of the soil which can after more than a century of cultivation bring forth such crops with so little artificial aid. Then he begins to think of the great markets that lie within easy reach, and is still more forcibly struck by the almost entire absence of market gardens and truck farms and the general lack of care of the orchards.

Byron C. Platt.

The next number in the Entertainment Course of this season will be presented at Masonic Hall on Wednesday evening, Dec. 20. We have enjoyed the Marguerite Smith people and the originality and freshness of the breezy sketch shown us by the inflexible Bowman and on the occasion of which we write Byron Platt, a wonderful lecturer, known on the lecture stage as The Man With a Message, will make his initial bow to a Louisa audience.

Mr. Platt comes without the enticing strains of music with no help of wig, grease paint or powder, with no extraneous aids whatever, but with reputation of being at once an entertainer and helper to higher and better things. He comes as a prophet of a New Era, a message which is one has said "interprets Jesus Christ in terms of present day life." One Chattanooga leader has said of Mr. Platt's lecture that it is the strongest one ever given in their course.

The following from the Memphis Commercial Appeal strikes the News as being one of the strongest endorsements that could be written of any man:

"Holding the audience spell bound which filled to its capacity the auditorium of the First Methodist Church, Byron C. Platt delivered his lecture last night on the subject of 'American Morals.' When the speaker finished there were cheers from all over the house, which came from throats not speakable in public places. Men gripped the backs of benches and one was heard to say: 'He is right.' The people listened as perhaps they had never listened before."

A man who could win such a notice is surely worth hearing. Masonic Hall should be packed next Wednesday night.

Wedding Bells.

Of much social interest in the home community of the young people was the marriage of Miss Bertha Watson, the handsome young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Watson, and Dr. C. B. Preston of Kingston, W. Va. The wedding occurred at noon at the Clinton Hotel, at Cincinnati. Rev. T. H. Clements, former pastor of the First Baptist Church, at Cattlettsburg, performed the ceremony. The bride, who is a handsome brunette, wore a blue tailored broadcloth, with hat and gloves to match. The wedding was witnessed by just a few friends of the family, also two aunts of the bride, Mrs. F. L. Stewart, of Louisa, and Mrs. M. G. Watson, of Hontington, also Dr. B. F. Preston, of Charleston, a brother of the groom.—Ashtand Independent.

The bride has visited relatives in Louisa, where she was quite popular with her many friends.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

Detective and Prisoner Are Both Killed.

John Vanhooze, of Cattlettsburg, and Gid Marcum, of Mingo County, are the Victims.

Detective John Vanhooze, of Cattlettsburg, and Gid Marcum, of some where near Breeden, W. Va., were both killed last Sunday as a result of Marcum's arrest by the detective. Nothing very definite can be learned just now of the double tragedy, as all reports concerning it are conflicting. It is said that for a long time the N. & W. railroad has been the field where robbers and thieves have successfully plied their vocation, with only an occasional arrest. A few days ago Vanhooze, who was employed by the Baldwin Agency, received orders to go up the Twelve Pole division of the N. & W. and arrest Marcum, who was suspected of being guilty of some of the depredations on its property.

Vanhooze went in search of Marcum, taking with him a constable or deputy sheriff named George Danron. Somewhere between Breeden and Dingosa they found Marcum who, when told what they wanted, surrendered in apparent good humor and all three started for a train.

Here comes in what seems at this distance a most unaccountable thing. The officers neither handcuffed their prisoner nor searched him for weapons, and while thus walking along Marcum, as suddenly as lightning strikes, drew a pistol, shot detective Vanhooze three times, once in the arm and once in the stomach, the third shot through the head, killing him instantly. He then turned his weapon on Danron, but the officer was too quick for him and shot him through the left eye, the wound causing instant death.

Vanhooze was married, leaving a widow and two children. He was a son of Jeff Vanhooze, who many years ago was a resident of this city and was at one time city marshal.

EASTERN KENTUCKY.

The Louisville Post Gives Our Section Good Write-up.

Eastern Kentucky has come into its own at last. Progress and prosperity have planted their banners on its mountain tops; keys of gold are unlocking those vast storehouses wherein nature placed ages ago coal enough to provide for the comfort and energies of a nation.

Events that are as important as any that have taken place in the history of the State are now transpiring in the land that is shadowed by the Cumberland and along the mountain ranges that separate Kentucky from the Old Dominion.

Capitalists providing its millions for the development of this long dormant section, with its wonderful treasures; the railroads are thrusting in their huge arms to bring out its wealth; men who have conducted great enterprises are devoting themselves to this new land, not of promise but of certainty, and all Kentucky is about to enter upon a new period of State growth through the advance of the eastern section.

What is happening in Eastern Kentucky today is, therefore, of first interest to the people of Kentucky, and especially to Louisville, as the city which is certain to feel the metropolis of the State, and as a benefits of this new era into which Eastern Kentucky has entered.

The development of this section has been in progress now for several years, but it is only in the past two or three years that it has reached the quick, and it is in the past twelve months that it has been possible to comprehend and follow the amazing changes that are sweeping away the old mountain land of feud and moonshine legend, replacing it with a region of industrial importance and wealth second to none in the United States.

Now there can be noted, not merely year by year, but day by day the progress of this change, the building of railroads, the opening of new mines, the construction of cities in the wilderness, the building of homes and school houses, churches, with wealth for all who have the energy and foresight to deserve it, with employment and plenty for every one who is willing to do his share in the great work of bringing to the full the resources of the Kentucky mountains.

In this development there are enlisted great companies of organized Eastern capital to do for the mountains everything that money has power to do when directed by skill and experience; the railroads, with their tremendous powers, and the men who have faith in the future of the mountains and who have planned and worked and waited for what has come.

Today the story is a re-echo of the expenditure by the railroads of millions for new lines into the coal fields and such achievements as that of the Consolidation Coal Company in building in the heart of the mountains the city of Jenkins, which within two years time will have 20,000 inhabitants.

Wolf Slain in Louisa.

Louisa has not gone back to the days when bear and deer came to the river to quench their thirst and the wild turkey called to its mate in the dense forest, which at one time flourished where Walnut Grove addition to Louisa now exists on the beautifully engraved stock of the noted company of Wolcott, Catchen, Shearer & Co. Neither is the whoop of the original Red man heard instead of the "musical" notes sounded from the windows of the I. O. O. F. every Friday night. But it is a solemn fact that a real wolf, not a live one stuffed with straw, was run down (or up) and shot fatally dead in that part of Louisa known as Italy on Tuesday of this week.

When its presence was first reported the greatest excitement ensued. Children big enough to climb trees perched on the topmost limbs, while smaller ones took to the cellar, followed by Jeff Wilson and two of Arble's dogs. Yea know they are "possum dogs and were skored at a wolf.

Meanwhile the bolder citizens gathered to the number of about eleven and gave chase, the wolf leading by about half a mile. It looked for a time as if the ferocious varmint would escape, but your uncle Josh Diamond, who hunted wolves when John Gartin was a mere child, knew exactly what to do. So he just took his trusty weepin, Josh did, and just sat in his front door till Mr. Wolf tried to sneak by, and carefully aiming the afore-said weepin for about five minutes he let drive, so he did, and the pesky thing dropped stone dead. If you dare doubt for a single minute that Uncle Josh did these things just walk over to Italy where the mud is fordable and he'll show you the identical spot where the wolf stood still and let him shoot.

LATELY:—Since the above was put in type we have learned that it was Arble Wilson's pet wolf that had broken out the night before and killed nearly every chicken in north-west Louisa.

Shot By Their Brother.

The home of Mr. John Austin, of Garrets Bend, was the scene of a serious accident, on Wednesday of last week. While mother was busy with the cares of her dully work, the children, aged one, eight and twelve years, respectively, were at play.

The older one took up a shot gun that was loaded and in some manner it was discharged. The baby, one year old, was killed and the brother, eight years old, was severely wounded in the right shoulder. His recovery is assured.

This is a very deplorable affair and should be a warning to every parent, that the careless use of fire arms about the house, may some time wreck the hearts of the parents in a like manner.—Lincoln Republican.

Kentucky War Claims.

A total of $78,234 in Kentucky war claims will be asked by the War Claims Committee of the House in its annual bill. This legislation failed at the recent session, but the members of the War Claims Committee, on which Representative F. W. Sims, of Tennessee, is chairman, and Representative R. Y. Thomas, Jr., of Kentucky, a member, promise to pass the bill before the end of this session. The bill is introduced soon. The list given by districts below was secured from an advance copy of the bill furnished the Courier-Journal.

Both Kentucky Senators will be heard from when the Senate war claims bill is drafted, and they will undoubtedly insert many Kentucky claims in that measure. But the following list concerns the House members only, and contains these claims.

Ninth District—Secured by Representative W. J. Fields; total, $2,530. Daniel Mans, Maysville, $270. John W. Rohrlins, Bracken county, $263; T. P. Salyer, Lawrence county, $350; John E. Wells, Mason county, $256; William J. Worthington, Greenup county, $36; St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 18, Cynthiana, $600; Baptist church, Flemingsburg, $775.

Another Who Can "Come Back."

Under this headline the Frankfort correspondent of the Louisville Times of Tuesday said this of a well known Loolain:

"John Rice, one of the prominent Democrats of the Big Sandy section, arrived yesterday and was given a cordial greeting by his many old friends here. He was clerk in the Auditor's office many years ago under Maj. L. C. Norman, and, if reports be true, will be in the Auditor's office again under Henry Bosworth, after January 1st. Mr. Rice looks as young as he did fifteen years ago when he left Frankfort. He always takes an active interest in politics and is recognized as a good hostler.

FARMER'S WEEK

At Kentucky State University, Lexington, January, 2nd.

Farmers week is to begin January 2 at the College of Agriculture of Kentucky State University in Lexington and the programme is one that should appeal to progressive agriculturists in all parts of the State.

Some of the important events of the week are the annual corn show, the State dairy show and the meeting of the State Horticultural Society. In addition there are to be breeders' conventions, representing the various lines of stock raising, and also instructions for women in the several branches of domestic science. Immediately following Farmers' Week will begin the winter short course in agriculture, which will continue until the middle of March, thus offering a splendid opportunity for those who desire to enlarge their knowledge of scientific farming.

The corn show and the horticultural exhibits will be of particular importance, Kentucky is capable of growing bigger and better crops of corn and the opportunities that are offered in the State for development in fruit growing are to a large extent neglected. The displays of corn and fruits will show something of the possibilities that are ahead of us in the way of more efficient agricultural endeavor. Kentucky's corn yield should easily be doubled and Kentucky's orchard products should be multiplied. The boys' clubs are demonstrating how corn may be grown. Possibly, after a while, the boys may embark in horticulture, as they have done in some sections of the country, and many convince their fathers of the folly of expecting an orchard to maintain itself without assistance and pay decent return on the investment.

Farmers' Week at Lexington should be a successful week in every way, and with every succeeding year should become a more powerful force for agricultural expansion.

The battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor by an explosion from the outside. This is the gist of a short statement issued by the Navy Department based on findings made by the Joint Army and Navy Board, which spent several months in Havana harbor investigating the wreck.

The statement was as follows: "The board finds that the injuries to the bottom of the Maine were caused by the explosion of a charge of low form of explosive exterior to the ship between frames 28 and 31, Strake B. Port side.

"This resulted in lighting and exploding the contents of the six inch reserve magazine, A-14-M, said contents including a large quantity of black powder. The Geological Survey engineers broke camp on Lott's Creek last Sunday, and the finishing touches were put on their season's field work during the early days of the present week, whence all the members of the party have either gone to their homes on vacation or returned to Washington. One interesting discovery they made is a natural bridge on Upper Second creek, almost due east of Hazard. The span is about fifty feet. Probably many people have known of this natural curiosity, and have thought little of it, but it goes into the records of the Geological Survey as one of the special topographical features of Perry county. The highest points in this section is one of the high knobs of Lost Mountain, near the head of Lost Creek, in Knott county. Both of these points are about 2,000 feet above sea level, and the average height of the ridges and mountains is from 1,400 feet to 1,600 feet.

NOTES OF THE FARM

COLUMN OF INTERESTING NEWS THAT WILL BENEFIT FARMERS.

SCHOOL WORK WITH CORN

It will be a good plan for the pupils of each school to make a collection of ears of corn that will be good samples of the crop of their neighborhood. There will be many varieties and colors. There will be yellow, white, some red ears and some a sort of mixture of red and yellow, which is known as "bloody butcher." There will be quite a difference between the ears in size, shape, color, size of cob, depth of grain, etc.

Count the number of rows on the different ears. You will find that there is an even number of rows on each ear. There is never an uneven number, for it is not natural for it to be so. This is due to the fact that the ear of corn represents four or more spikes grown together, and each spike has two rows. Some years ago some one offered a large prize for an ear of corn with an uneven number of rows but such an ear was not found.

Notice that some of the ears will be well filled—the grains will be grown well over the butt end as well as the tip end. Others will have a large space at the butt where there will be no grain. The shank of such an ear is probably very large and washard for the husker to break off. Some will not be filled clear to the tip end, and the ear will be quite tapering in shape. With such ears it is possible that the season did not favor a completion of the growth or the setting of the grain at that end. This might happen by reason of very wet weather for several days when all of the tip grains were ready to receive the pollen, or fine dust that comes from the tassels and blows about in the air when the ear is forming. Some of this fine dust might alight upon the silk so that a grain will be formed. If the weather was so wet that the pollen could not get about, the ear might be imperfect, as the tip develops last.

Note that some ears of corn have deep grains, while some other ears have grains that are quite shallow. Also notice that where the grain is wide at the age there will be little or no space between the grains near the cob. This indicates more value, as the shelled corn will weigh more comparatively, from such a type of ear. It is generally thought by corn growers that a rough ear will have deeper grain than a smooth ear will. Examine some rough ears and see if this is so.

After shelling some grains notice that there is a slight depression on the broad side toward the tip end of each. This is called the germ of embryo. When the grain is placed in the soil or in the seed water the small plant will begin to grow from this place. The germ will be found to be much larger in some grains than in others. The germ contains a high percentage of protein, ash and fat, and thus the larger it is the more valuable the grain will be as a feed. You have noticed that mice and rats will generally eat out the germ end of the grain instead of eating the whole grain. It has been found that by growing corn plants together from seed that has large germs, corn will be produced that will produce grains with still larger germs and likewise richer in the most valuable food materials. It is protein that makes young stock grow, making muscle and other growing tissues.

Split the grain lengthwise and you will find that the upper part of it is mostly pure white. This is mostly starch. Where the germ is found the color will be a clear pearl. When corn is gathered in the fall, that which is to be used for seed should be placed where it will dry out well. If it is left to remain in the damp and then be frozen hard the germ will be damaged and the seed will not grow so well when it is planted in the spring. If you have not already done so, begin to select your seed corn and place it where it will be dry and not freeze. Ask your father to do this with his seed corn. Then test it out in the spring and see which will germinate the best. This will be very interesting work to be done in the school room.—Ohio Farmer.

DUCKS FOR PROFIT

At this season of the year, when there is little actual work to be done in the poultry yard, it is well for those interested in the subject to gather in a new store of information and to form their plans for the coming season accordingly.

Within the last few years there has been widespread enthusiasm aroused by the Indian Runner duck.

This duck bears the same relation to others that the Leghorn bears to chickens; it is the greatest of egg producers; it is also rather small in size, and as a table fowl is surpassed by the larger breeds. It is estimated that a flock of Indian Runners will average an annual production of 200 eggs, while some individual ducks will lay as many as 250 eggs.

The choice of breed depends entirely upon what purpose they are intended to serve; if eggs are wanted, the Indian Runners should be selected, but if the ducks are raised for home consumption, or are to be marketed as "green ducklings," the Imperial Pekin is a fine breed. They are pure white, are rapid growers, and are a much larger fowl when mature than the Runners.

The next question is that of hatching. While an incubator is the best means of hatching chickens eggs, and is also used on all large duck farms, there is one important point to be remembered in regard to the artificial incubation of duck eggs; they need more moisture, and a good hatch will not under ordinary conditions, be had from the average hot-air incubator.

A machine that has special arrangements for supplying and regulating the moisture is the only one to be recommended for duck eggs. The writer speaks from experience as well as theory, having lost 80 per cent. of some expensive thoroughbred eggs last spring; although moisture was supplied by sprinkling, and also by keeping a pan of wet sand below the egg tray, yet when the eggs hatched the ducks were unable to get out on account of the extreme toughness of the skin covering the inner side of the shell.

When hatch duck eggs very well, as animal heat always contains moisture; the trouble is that a hen can sit on only eleven or twelve eggs, and four weeks of her time are spent in hatching them, not including the two or three weeks that she will brood them afterward.

Ducks are harder than chickens. A larger proportion will reach maturity, and at a slight expenditure of time and care it is important to keep them out of the dampness in comfortably warm quarters, for the first ten days; after that they are pretty well able to take care of themselves. They must be fed on wet food from the beginning, until containing one part cornmeal two parts bran is good for the first few days, after which the meal may be increased until the proportion is reversed. Unless milk is added to the mash, beef scraps are needed. It is important to feed some coarse sand or fine grit once a day, mixed with the food; unlike chickens, ducks will not pick this up for themselves, yet they cannot digest their food without it.

They have no crop and cannot store away any food, so it is important that they should be fed four or five times a day, and no more at any time than they will eat it up clean. Clean drinking water must be within reach at all times; they wash their food down with this, and without it the young ones have been known to choke to death.

They will go neck and forth from food to water and consume a surprising quantity of both. It is not at all necessary for ducks to have ponds or puddles; many growers think they can be raised more satisfactorily when not allowed to swim. But it is essential that there should be a plentiful supply of drinking water constantly before them, even at night; one of the patented fountains should be used so as to keep the water pure.

At ten weeks old ducks will be ready for the market, if they are of good stock and have been properly handled. There should be taken not to frighten them; they are very nervous, and will not grow or fatten well if frequently alarmed. On duck farms artificial light is provided for them at night to keep them from being also weak in the morning. When it is necessary to catch them, they should be grasped by the neck, not by the legs. They must not be required to jump over any obstacle or to go up an incline.

One point in favor of duck raising is the fact that they are free from lice, mites and other vermin. Neither are they subject to disease common among chickens. Equipment is less expensive; all they need is a roof to shelter them, without other roosts, nests or scratching shed. They are not harmed by a long spell of wet weather, and can stand extremes of both heat and cold. When marketed at the proper age they bring almost double the price of chickens. The fowls also sell at a good price—somewhere between 40 and 50 cents a pound wholesale.

In addition to the Pekins and Indian Runners, the prominent varieties of ducks are the Rouens, Muscovys and the Aylesburys.

Dr. R. D. Frasier, Fort Gay, W. Va., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills the best remedy on the market for kidney and bladder complaint. I prescribed this preparation in many cases and at the present time six or eight of my patients are taking it with excellent results. I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with the most satisfactory results and am proud in my praise for them. The residents of this vicinity suffer considerably from kidney and bladder trouble due to the poor drinking water. I have found Doan's Kidney Pills the one remedy that can be depended upon for relief. It has been my experience that all difficulties caused by weak kidneys, such as irregular passages of the kidneys, secretions, gravel, dropsical swellings, lumbago, pains in the back and hips, etc., can be removed by Doan's Kidney Pills. A few doses of this remedy taken immediately when the trouble is noticed, will save much misery."

HELLO! SANTA, WHERE ARE YOU?

GOOD HOUSE FOR CHICKENS

There is No Need of Elaborate Structure, but It Should Be Dry and Free From Drafts.

In describing what he deems the best house for chickens, Mr. Glenn T. Sponenbergh of Oswego county, New York, writes the Farm and Home as follows:

Front Elevation and Floor Plan.

If concrete is used in the construction of the foundation and floor it will make a rat and water-proof floor that is sanitary and easily cleaned. The rest of the house should be built of wood, as the forms for concrete would cost nearly as much as the siding itself. The frame is 2x4-inch material and the siding and roof boards of yellow pine surfaced both sides. If the sides are covered with roofing paper, it makes a tight and very warm house. The roof should be covered with some good roofing laid according to directions so as to make it as tight as possible. Shingles are not suitable for a building of this kind, as the roof is apt to be damp most of the time. The curtain front house is the driest and most easily regulated in accordance with the weather. It is cheaper to build, is more easily cleaned and the floor space is more fully utilized than in the scratching-shed type. This house should be built tight so that the ventilation is from the south, therefore no drafts. With the scratching-shed house the roosting room is almost always sure to be damp. But by removing the partition this is eliminated and healthier hens are the result. If any one doubts that a flock of hens stir up much dust just let him stand on the front side of a curtain front house when they are fed. Open the curtain and when he sees the cloud of dust they raise I believe he will think fowls need more ventilation.

A shed roof is best, as it is easier to build, provides greater volume of sunlight and has no peak to become filled with cobwebs. The pens should be deep rather than long and shallow. This places the sunlight on the floor instead of on the back wall, therefore a dried floor and happier hens. The pens should be large enough to accommodate 50 hens and two or more cocks. One 20 feet deep and 12 feet wide will furnish the required floor space.

The accompanying plans of side and front elevations and floor arrangement illustrate what I think is the best house. This contains pens 12x20 feet, the front being 8 1/2 feet and the back 5 feet high. This is as high as is necessary to build on as low as is easy to work in. The front contains, to each pen, one double sash window with the upper sash hinged at the top. This is opened when too cold or stormy to raise the curtain. A frame 5x5 feet, with the top hinged to swing in, is covered with muslin or cheesecloth. On the outside of this opening is tacked woven wire to keep the fowls in while curtain is open during the day, except during a hard storm and in very cold weather.

The platform under the roost is 2 1/2 feet from the floor, and the nests are the same height, being entered from the platform. This leaves nearly all the floor space available to the hens, and every nook and corner is cleaned with ease. The roosts are 2x2-inch material rounded at the top. For a breeding house I would make the pens 12 feet deep and 8 feet wide, which would hold as many hens as are desired with one cock, but for a laying house the larger size is the better and more economical.

Condition of Laying Hens.
A hen in the best laying condition has some surplus fat on her body. This means that her bodily wants have been supplied, and there is some to spare. A very fat hen seldom lays well; a poor hen cannot lay well. The first part of the egg which is made is the yolk, which contains 30 percent of albumen and 64 percent fat. New growth and egg production only come from the surplus food not needed to keep the body. Corn is an excellent grain, but is so relished by the fowls that are liable to overeat. Wheat, with its by-products, is the most useful grain to the poultryman.

Hard Runs Bad.
Keeplow fowls on hard runs will frequently cause swollen feet and legs. They must have some loose ground to scratch over.

WINTER CARE OF CHICKENS

Breeders and Promising Pullets Separated From Utility Stock—Warm Meal Fed at Noon.

November finds me busy looking to my houses, the window sashes, etc., spreading dry earth in the pens, so that my pets may be comfortable during the winter. By this time I have called and arranged my stock for the winter so that I have birds of about the same age, together with my breeders and promising pullets, separated from my utility stock, the cockerels, of course, by themselves, says a writer in the Orange Judd Farmer. The morning meal, thrown in the litter, for the utility pullets is made up of wheat one ounce, oats and barley one-fourth ounce each. Three noons of each week they are fed one ounce of green cut bone each, and the remaining noon a mush of one-half chopped feed, oats and corn, and one-half bran at the rate of one ounce each, dry weight. The evening meal consists of one-half ounce each of wheat, cracked corn and barley, except in extreme cold weather, when nothing but cracked corn is fed.

Male birds and breeding pen females get for breakfast one-half ounce each of wheat, corn and oats; at noon, row vegetables; at night, one-half ounce each of corn and oats, again substituting corn in very cold weather. These fowls get one ounce of green cut bone once a week, and all stock get raw cabbage and mangels every day. The ration for the utility stock I consider a forcing ration; in the two winters I have used it I have obtained a little more than a dozen eggs each during December, January and February. March is usually a banner month for eggs. The mash is not a good one, but is the best I can use at noon with the short time at my disposal. Noon is the time I wish my birds to have a warm meal.

I keep down vermin by whitewashing twice a year, giving the birds road dust for a bath, and putting tobacco stems in the nests. The male birds I dust frequently with a good house powder. My plan of feeding I realize is not ideal, it is criticised by local poultrymen, but I give it, as it may be of use to someone else.

MERITS OF COCHIN VARIETY

Excellent Producers of Eggs in Winter and Young Chickens Are Fairly Good on the Table.

Cochins have certainly the merit of laying well in winter, due probably to their profuse feathering, which prevents undue evaporation of heat. Young chickens are fairly good on the table, but when older they cannot be regarded as even passable in that respect. The flesh is at all times very yellow, and more largely developed on the thighs than the breast. This is due to the fact that Cochins are not flyers; they have only small wings, whilst very large ones would be needed to support such a heavy frame. The weight which Cochins attain is very good indeed. Adult cocks range from twelve to fifteen pounds, hens eight to eleven pounds, and cockerels and pullets two to three pounds less. They are very hardy, and can stand almost any place and soil, but they do best on short, level grass, for the foot feather is broken and spoiled when on long grass or rough ground.

The partridge Cochins possess a great variety and brilliancy of color.

the admixture in parts of glossy metallic black, rich dark red, bay and orange giving a very striking effect. The breast, coverts, wing butt, underparts, tail and leg feathers are black, and the saddle and hackle golden red or orange. This refers to cocks, and the hens are equally effective, as the light brown plumage is distinctly pencilled with a darker shade.

Feeding for Result.
In feeding the hen we must use our best judgment to a certain extent. If we are to feed for the egg production, we must give those foods necessary to make those elements which go to make up the egg as well as those that will keep up the hen in the best condition for that purpose.

Introducing New Breeds.
In introducing a new breed, the originators quite frequently advertise the "juiciness" of the flesh, as though it was peculiar to that breed. The truth is, that this juiciness, or the lack of it, lies chiefly with the work of the cook. The flesh of fowls is judged by the flavor and tenderness, and these are largely in the hands of the cook.

"SHOWING" THE VETERAN FARMER.

The boy's corn club of Whitley county held its first corn show a few days ago in Whitesburg Whitley is a mountain county and a mineral county. It has some good agricultural land, however, where the farmers have been tilling along in the good old ways, raising from ten to fifteen bushels of corn to the acre and congratulating themselves. In case they had a few wagon loads of the product to sell after reserving a sufficient quantity for home consumption.

Some of these Whitley county farmers were surprised, no doubt at the showing made at the Boys' Corn Club, one boy, for instance, showed with a record of a little more than 121 bushels to the acre; another with something over 113 bushels; a third with 103 bushels and a fourth with ninety bushels.

Several of the boys exceeded the eighty bushel mark and set a fine example for some of the veteran farmers. These are excellent results and they illustrate the possibilities of corn growing in Kentucky where there are careful seed selection and intelligent cultivation.

The Boys' Corn Clubs are now being held from all the sections of the State and the results should have a splendidly beneficial effect on general agricultural conditions. Too many Kentucky farmers are covering too much territory in their farming operations. The "little farm well tilled" is a better produced than a big farm half tended. The farmer may glory in his land, acres and exult in the pride of possession and the extent of his endeavor, at where does he benefit himself when he produces on five, ten or twenty acres of ground what he should be able to grow on one, two or four acres? It may be that in his farm adherence to the methods of his forefathers he thinks that such results are not possible, but the boys' corn clubs are showing him that he is mistaken.

TWO HUNDRED MILLION BARRELS OF OIL.

More than 200,000,000 barrels of oil, with a value of nearly $125,000,000, were produced in the United States last year, according to David T. Day, of the United Geological Survey, in the advance chapter on petroleum from "Mineral Resources of the United States" for 1910.

The petroleum industry in the United States, says Dr. Day, has been characterized by a phenomenal increase each year for the last four years. Each year's gain over that of the year before has been so remarkable as to lead to the belief that the limit production had been reached, but the increase has continued rapidly. After varying between 50,000,000 and 60,000,000 barrels annually in the decade between 1899 and 1904, the oil output was over 63,000,000 barrels in 1909 and increased to 88,000,000 barrels in 1902. In 1903 it passed the 100,000,000 barrel mark. In 1904 it was over 170,000,000 barrels. In 1905 nearly 135,000,000 barrels. After a slight decline in 1906 the output rose again, in 1907 reaching 165,000,000 barrels. It was 178,000,000 barrels in 1908, 183,000,000 barrels in 1909, 205,555,048 barrels in 1910, a gain of 14 per cent over the record output in 1909. This brought the total output since the beginning of the petroleum industry to more than two billion barrels, ever witnessed was endured before.

IN WHITE OR BLUE SERGE MADE UP FROM OUTWORN HAT

Complete Outfit That Can Not Help but Look Well Made Up of Either Material.

Either navy or white serge looks well made in this style. The skirt is a three-piece pattern, having a wide front, and sides joining up center back; the front is joined to sides by costume into an evening toilet or make a low-necked gown suitable for afternoon tea, hence it is called "Utility," and its right to the name will easily be seen.

Novel Bag Easily Made From Material After It Has Served Original Purpose.

Carefully preserve the white or light colored Milan, horse hair, Tuscan, chip or Panama hat. It cannot be made over into headgear for another summer. It certainly can be transformed into a bag for holding handkerchiefs simply by flattening out the brim, facing it with a shirring of ribbon of whatever shade is to be the color scheme of the bag, finishing its edge with a quilling of narrow ribbon and then putting in deep, full lining of heavy silk into the crown of the hat.

This lining is made in the usual way with drawstrings at its top, but instead of being tucked backward into the crown, it is drawn upward by supplementary straps of ribbon attached to its sides, and these in turn are joined to the center of the shirring or handle attached to two opposite sides of the hat's brim. To make the illusion of the hat more complete, the crown is sometimes trimmed with large bows of ribbon or wreaths of flowers, but its top must always be kept flat so that it may set squarely upon any smooth surface.

Another novel handkerchief bag which will do as a favor for either a man or a girl at a dance may be made from a half yard length of China silk. One end of the silk is hemmed over a small wooden embroidery ring, across which has first been stretched a piece of the same silk to form the bottom of the bag, whose other end is drawn over a second embroidery ring, which is left uncovered. When held upright by this second ring the bag is pipe shaped and has an open top, but it may be securely closed by twisting its center and dropping the upper ring squarely upon the mass of silk.

Scissors Case.

A pretty scissors case can be made by cutting two triangular pieces of cardboard a little larger than the size of the scissors they are to cover, and a small triangular-shaped piece to serve as a flap to the case.

Cover all with silk, satin or any fancy piece of material, turalag in the edges and whipping the silk on the boards. Now sew the longest edges of the board together and the flap to the short edge of one board. Sew a pretty cord, gilt if possible, all the way around the edge of the case and fasten the flap down with a small bow or ribbon or a fancy button. This would make a dainty and useful holiday gift if fitted with a good pair of scissors.

Her Gowns.

For tailored suit wear, for mornings, at-dancing occasions and general wear, the always popular capelets in the pretty autumn tins will be the glove she will adopt.

For the afternoons, however, and the evening, she will divide her choice for the soft, velvet-like suedes will be almost as fashionable as the smooth, finished and fine French kidskins. Plain white, of course, will be very greatly worn, but pale tans—black, champagne, delicate pinks, pearl gray and the creamy yellows will also come in for a due share of attention.

White Gaiters Are Worn.

The woman who has pumps and does not wish to get high shoes until late in the winter can now use her cloth gaiters and be very much in style. White ones are quite the fashion, and their rivals are pearl gray. These are worn with the black shoes with all kinds of gowns that are short and for the street.

A FACT ABOUT THE "BLUES"

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN.

COLUMN DEDICATED TO TIRED MOTHERS AS THEY JOIN THE HOME CIRCLE.

Let your most cherished friend be a woman whose companionship is uplifting and elevating to your character. One who by her pure and womanly conversation inspires you with hope and courage to strive to live for some thing which is higher and more noble; whose visits make you bless her when she has gone, and feel that you have been bettered by her coming.

Passing season, fleeting days. How time whugs its flight. The summer seems scarcely flown ere autumn time is near its close. How we should improve every opportunity to do good to get good and be good. The blessings we intend to confer should not be delayed. Soon the giver or receiver may be barred the privilege. Work while it is day for the night cometh.

The real pleasures of life are not to be bought. Amusement is for sale; but joy comes without price and without bargaining. There are no figures set upon happiness; it springs up in the pathway like a flower the seed of which has been wafted from some other world. The quiet, deep joys of life, benignant, like fall from heaven upon our hearts. None can command them, none can corner them. You may purchase assistance and interest, but affection and love come unsought, unsolicited, unbought. What wealth have you greater, more worth to you, than the tender kindness, the sympathy, the spirit of self-giving that goes out to you from other lives? Those assets are not on our office ledgers, but on the great ledgers of life from which our final balances are struck they are writ large.

Who of us is so immersed in the cares of business or so hardened by the grind of daily toil that we cannot find in this magic word, Home a charm beyond the spell of the apoplexy? Home! Home! The very name itself is anthem in an acorn. Composed of only four letters of the English alphabet, it is one of the simplest words known to the tongue of Tennyson and Shakespeare. It takes but a breath to voice it. It but a stroke to write it. But an ocean plummet cannot sound its crystal depth of meaning. It has been the theme of all artists. It has been the dream of all poets. It has been the burden of all songs. It has been the inspiration of all heroic thoughts and deeds and lives.

Every boy is going to have a confident, some one to whom he can tell his secrets and whisper his hopes and ambitions which he would not breathe to others, says Orison Swett Marden in "Success Magazine." We take it for granted that his mother will stand nearer to him than any other person, but every boy will have some male friend who will stand in a peculiar relation to him. This friend, this confident, should be his father. You cannot afford to have your boy feel that you are too busy or too indifferent to tell him how to fly his kite or bait his hook or make a toy or to play games with him. If you begin early enough, it is comparatively easy for you to gain your boy's confidence. From infancy he should grow up to feel that no one else can take your place; that you stand in a peculiar relation to him, which no one else can fill.

"A good wife"—how much happiness is contained in these three short words. Her power for good is perfectly irresistible. It does not matter how energetic or industrious a man may be, with a careless or spend-thrift wife his best efforts are vain.

We cannot honor with too deep a reverence the home affections; we cannot cherish them with too much solicitude. Members of the home circle lose nothing by being polite and kind to one another. Little children are such imitative creatures; if the father shows kindly attention to mother, bright eyes will see the act and be sure to do just like papa.

There are a thousand ways in which we can add to the peace and pleasure of our homes. Let the house all day long be the scene of pleasant words. Let us have music, for truly it is said that a home without music is like springtime without birds. Cultivate vocal music in the family if you cannot have instrumental. At night when all are gathered around the fireside what can be more pleasant than to sing the sweet songs?

The sour man is always sour; the mill of human kindness in his heart is curdled; there is no sweetness in the acid principle of his composition, nature has given him a quantum sufficit of lemon juice, but he has forgotten the saccharine ingredients; he is sour from the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, in sunshine and moonshine, twilight and daylight. When he awakes in the morning he grumbles because it is time to get up; his coffee is always too hot or too cold; his toast and his steak either overdone or underdone; he finds nothing satisfactory in the morning papers. When he goes out he invariably grumbles at the weather; if it is a little cool he calls it nippy weather; if mild he compares it to the tropics; should it drizzle, he declares it rains pitchforks; and a gentle breeze is a hurricane.

In ourselves the sunshine dwells. From ourselves the music swells; by ourselves our life is fed. With sweeter bitter our daily bread.

Helps the Farmer to Sell

THE FARMER was worried over the market reports. Cotton was rising. When it reached a certain figure he proposed to sell. The day before it had almost reached his price. What would it bring today?

The farmer needed first-hand information at once. He stepped to his Bell Telephone. The Long Distance connection with the buyer in a distant city informed him that cotton had reached the top figure, and he sold his crop at a handsome profit.

The Universal Bell System enables the producer in remote rural districts to keep in touch with market conditions without the necessity of leaving home.

By the way, have you a Bell Telephone?
